

City-to-City Bus reaches 1-year Milestone

Vermont's new City-to-City bus routes celebrated their first birthday in June. VTrans partner companies Greyhound Lines and Premier Coach of Milton, VT operate new full-size coach vehicles under the Vermont Translines moniker, which has provided more than 7,500 rides in the past 12 months.

Two new routes funded by VTrans include service from Burlington to Albany, NY via Bennington and Rutland as well as service between Rutland and White River Junction and on to Hanover, NH. Existing services operated by Greyhound between White River Junction and Springfield, MA were also improved, enabling better connections to their Boston-Montreal route.

The new routes, in particular the Route 7 connection to Albany, has proven popular with Burlington area riders. Once in Albany, NY, passengers can make convenient connections to more than 3,800 destinations across the United States and Canada via the national inter-city bus network.

Want to take a trip to Manchester for a day of shopping? Maybe spend a weekend in Montreal? No problem. The coach vehicles operated on these routes are more spacious, quiet, and comfortable than any airplane you may have flown on recently, with full WiFi capabilities so you can connect to your favorite entertainment while riding. Avoid the stress and expense of driving and parking at your destination and enjoy your travel time by kicking back and leaving the driving to the professionals.
